Letter from the Director

Legacy, Service, Learning—these three words capture the essence of the Lamar Soutter Library's efforts to improve the health of the public by enhancing access to information by University of Massachusetts-Worcester faculty, staff, students, and clinical partners. In FY2005, the Library pursued this goal in several ways: by helping users learn more about the process of locating, retrieving, and evaluating quality information, by offering new services and programs, and by building and enhancing a collection of books, journals, and online resources.

In many ways, FY2005 can be best described as a "set-up" year for great performances to come. Library managers, supervisors, and staff began thinking about the process for developing a new strategic plan. Regional Medical Library staff began preparing for the process of re-competing for the 2006-2011 National Library of Medicine contract, to continue serving as the regional library for the New England states. The Library applied to become a host site for the National Library of Medicine's traveling exhibit, Changing the Face of Medicine: Celebrating America's Women Physicians, opening May 5, 2006.

As stewards of published knowledge, the Library must ensure that its users have not only current but, also, older relevant materials that meet their needs. We must also provide the best service and an environment conducive to life-long learning. This annual report gives just a flavor of the work that the outstanding individuals who make up the Library staff do to achieve these goals. Legacy, Service, and Learning defines the past, present, and future of the Lamar Soutter Library.

The LSL: A Link for Healers and the Humanities

During FY2005, the Lamar Soutter Library hosted several cultural events accenting the human side of health care.

October 7, 2004
Before a full house in the Library's Rare Books Room, the School's Chancellor/Dean Aaron Lazare, MD read excerpts from and signed copies of his book On Apology.

February 9, 2005
Poets Victoria Longino, Emily Ferrera, and Eve Rifkah read selections from their verse. Ms. Longino, an Associate Professor at the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy, accompanied her reading choices with commentary upon relationships between medicine and the muse. Ms. Ferrera, employed by the UMass Office of Medical Education, shared passages inspired by the death of her son. Finally, Ms. Rifkah, co-editor of the poetry journal Diner, read from her work At the Leprosarium.

March 9, 2005
On the ninety-sixth anniversary of his birth, a website celebrating the life and professional achievements of Dr. Lamar Soutter was unveiled. The proceedings were highlighted by personal recollections of Dr. Soutter that were provided by Mrs. Lamar Soutter and H. Brownell Wheeler M.D.

March 16, 2005
Dr. Alice Flaherty, Instructor of Neurology at Massachusetts General Hospital, and author of The Midnight Disease, spoke on the neurological causes of writer's block.

On April 27, 2005
UMMS Associate Professor of Psychiatry Dr. Richard Berlin presented awards to the prize-winners of the first annual Gerald F. Berlin Prize for Creative Writing, a competition originated as a tribute to the doctor's late father, who struggled with a severe, chronic disease.

The Humanities in Medicine Collection
Launched in June, 2002 as a collaborative venture between the Lamar Soutter Library and the Worcester District Medical Society, the Humanities in Medicine Collection enjoyed further expansion during FY2005. Resonating with ideas and perspectives from philosophy and literature, the books and films on DVD that comprise this collection cover medical issues and themes in approaches and language accessible to the layperson. With this enlargement, the HIM Collection has been augmented beyond the size of the original goal of 500 items.

Regional and National Accomplishments of the NN/LM, NER

During FY2005, staff coordinators of the New England Regional (NER) office of the National Network of Libraries of Medicine (NN/LM) served 511 (including 44 new) members across the region. More than 1,000 service requests were processed, assisting resource libraries whose clientele include health educators, support groups, family caregivers, clinical providers, and patients. Among other highlights of the fiscal year:

- Nine awards were issued to eleven member libraries for electronic delivery or enhancing access through public access desktops
- Three Express Outreach awards were issued to develop an online course, conduct a joint program for physicians, and exhibit at a national conference
- Seven outreach subcontracts were initiated
- Thirty-eight classes were held for librarians and the healthcare workforce
- Twenty-seven venues were attended, showcasing eighteen NER exhibits
- Twenty-nine consumer health sessions were held for more than two hundred attendees who received training on MedlinePlus® and other resources; three new courses were added to the curriculum.

LSL Recognized with NCLIS Consumer Health Award

Visitors to the Lamar Soutter Library may have noticed a large banner hanging above our entrance. That banner marks the presentation of the NCLIS Blue Ribbon Consumer Health Information Recognition Award for Libraries to the Lamar Soutter Library on October 7, 2004.

The U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS) established the award in 2004 to identify "best health information practices" among libraries across the country. NCLIS encourages libraries to align their resources to address the needs of the country, and this award recognizes the public's pressing need for reliable health and medical information.

The LSL was designated the honoree for Massachusetts and was one of only 37 U.S. libraries to be so recognized.

Health Information for the Public: Web Sites Launched

In fulfilling its mission to provide quality health information to the public, the LSL launched two new consumer health-oriented projects in 2004. e-Mental Health in Central Massachusetts utilizes the power of the Internet to provide mental health care providers and their clients with easier access to authoritative information on mental health conditions and issues.

In May, Massachusetts became one of the first four states in the country to publicly release a Go Local project from MedlinePlus, the National Library of Medicine’s website for consumer health information. Go Local Massachusetts provides access to information about a wide variety of local health care services and agencies, all linked to the more than 700 health professionals covered in MedlinePlus. The project is in cooperation with the National Library of Medicine and supported by a grant from the National Network of Libraries of Medicine, New England Region.

Journal Collection: On the Move

The LSL has embarked on a "move and merge" project to assure safe storage of archival bound journals. By installing compact shelving in the eighth-floor closed-stack storage area, space was created within the School building to accommodate bound journals for several additional years. More recent years of bound journals will remain in open stacks within the Library, proper.

Staff members transferred 1965-1977 bound journals from the second and third floors of the Library to the eighth floor, where they were integrated with pre-1965 volumes within the new compact shelving.

Two phases of the three-phase project were completed in FY05. The final phase will be finished in FY06. For our patrons, the completion of this project will ensure convenient and ready access to older materials that are otherwise difficult to locate.
